Wolfe County High School Family and Consumer Sciences Teacher, Ashley Hampton recently partnered with University of Kentucky Cooperative Extension Agent for F.C.S. Ann Hollon to make a “Beef In the Classroom” grant a part of our local curriculum. The program is funded by beef producers through their “checkoff” administered by the Kentucky Beef Council. This program provides financial support for the use of beef products in middle and high school Family and Consumer Science and Culinary Arts courses. It reinforces lessons about lean beef selection, storage, preparation and nutrition. These two ladies worked closely to make sure our students gained valuable skills and knowledge about making beef a healthy choice they can use for a lifetime!
